"Seneca Meadows Wetland Preserve"

Reviewed March 15, 2013

Seneca Meadows Wetland Preserve is a great example of habitat creation. Once known as the Dove Farm, the Preserve is now host to Least Bittern, Grasshopper Sparrows, AM. Bittern, Savannah Sparrows, Bobolink. This past year Dickcissels made an appearance on the Preserve. With over 7 miles of walking trails and 2 neat observation platforms it will keep you coming back....

“Walking trails”

Reviewed March 16, 2013

I live nearby and walk the wetlands often. The flora has been returned to its original state. Many invasive species have been eradicated and original ones re-introduced. I never knew that there are three kinds of cattails, only one of which is native and is flourishing here. Depending on the time of year, there can be many birds - the...

“The Seneca Meadows Wetlands preserve is a beautiful place to observe nature.”

Reviewed March 15, 2013 via mobile

I took several cub scouts on a nature scavenger hunt at the preserve. It was a fantastic experience where the kids took notice of things in nature that we take for granted and are easily overlooked, red-winged blackbirds, for example. When we went the trail was flooded, apparently due to the beaver dam, so we were wet up to our...

“Much needed facility in Seneca County”

Reviewed March 15, 2013

My husband and I attended the "Wolf" presentation in January, and thoroughly enjoyed seeing the wolves up close and personal. We were very impressed with the facility, and I will be attending two more presentations. On March 20th, I will be participating in the flower arranging course, and then in April the workshop on herbs. We are looking forward to...

“Not very good because it is pretty new.”

Reviewed February 13, 2013

I may be back soon when we get down that way again. Mostly just a field of weeds. We didn't see any wildlife. Maybe the stench of tons of garbage chased them all away!
